

Katie Stahl, Senior Counsel at Mudd Law, has been a vital part of the firm for the past six years. Prior to her tenure at Mudd Law, she spent a decade at the esteemed firm of Lorange & Thompson. From the start of her career, Katie has dedicated her practice to supporting small businesses and individuals with their copyright, trademark, intellectual property, and business litigation needs. She champions her clients' entrepreneurial values, acting as a dedicated advocate in their efforts to grow and safeguard their intellectual property and goodwill.

Katie's representative experience underscores her proficiency. Notably, she successfully defeated a well-known internet registrar's motion to dismiss, setting a precedent upheld across multiple jurisdictions. Her track record also includes obtaining summary judgment in a significant breach of contract matter against a leading advertising firm, where she played an integral role in securing a sweeping sanctions award that was a resounding win for the client. In addition, Katie adeptly navigated a copyright infringement case involving e-book sales within the competitive bodybuilding industry, negotiating a resolution that not only resolved the dispute but also laid the foundation for a successful business marketing relationship. Her commitment extends to pro bono work, as demonstrated in her representation of a college student and their family facing copyright infringement claims from movie companies. Through skillful negotiation, she secured a discounted settlement, exemplifying her dedication to serving her clients' best interests.