

Brad Simon Bio

Brad Simon, a senior litigator at Capovilla & Williams, represents military members all over the world and has an exceptional record of achieving successful results in the most challenging military justice cases.

As a former Air Force Judge Advocate, he defended service members in high-stakes cases involving sexual assault, domestic violence, child abuse, child pornography, drug-related offenses, and other misconduct allegations under the UCMJ.

A native of Delaware, Brad earned his Bachelor of Arts in political science and economics from the University of Delaware before completing his Juris Doctor at Wake Forest University School of Law. While in law school, he found his passion for criminal defense and trial advocacy while competing for the university's nationally ranked trial competition team. Today, Brad helps develop and mentor the profession's next generation of top litigators by teaching trial advocacy at St. Mary's University Law School in San Antonio while also serving as a coach for the school's the mock trial team.
